Clintonville-Beechwold Community Resources Center

About

The Clintonville-Beechwold Community Resources Center was founded in 1971 by a group of North Broadway United Methodist Church (NBUMC) members who lived in Clintonville. They assessed the needs of the Clintonville-Beechwold area and discovered social problems as well as resources. From there, they wanted to create something separate from NBUMC where neighbors could help neighbors.

As part of the century-old Settlement House Movement, CRC is a community-based social services agency that brings people together to help individuals and families build upon their strengths. We promote self-sufficiency while respecting individual worth, rights, and dignity; Thus, creating a greater quality of life for everyone throughout the community. When needs arise, CRC responds.

CRC is part of the Columbus Federation of Settlements and member of the Human Service Chamber of Franklin County.

CRC Kinship Care

We support kinship caregivers who are unexpectedly raising a child, or children, because their parents are unavailable or unable to care for them. We focus on children maintaining stability in their life as well as supporting all family members. Through that assistance, we help the family manage their trauma and move forward to succeed in school and life.

Kinship Care Services

- Case management and material assistance
- Educational resources and referrals
- Income assistance information and advocacy
- Referrals for clothing, food, housing, supportive counseling, and more
- Information for utility assistance
